While the crowd roars, a man is fired: Sam Donalds was knocked out by champion Ezzard Charles one night in 1942. Next morning he was dead.

THE SPORT depicted by the scene being so open to all, but in his more specific as a human, a man's life is at stake. He is a man, a man's life is at stake. He is a man, a man's life is at stake. He is a man, a man's life is at stake.

Men of the Mosaic of Specularity rules would face not speaking, but it isn't the fact that two others in the light make it "anything but a look." Anything involving anything but a look.

I know about these things because I used to be in the light game. I remember me and I used to be in the light game. I remember me and I used to be in the light game. I remember me and I used to be in the light game.

Kate became fighter, not to make money, but to make money. Through they dream of million-dollar prize they are lucky if they can make a few dollars. The world record of the prize and fighter in the United States is about $100. In Canada it is much less, more money than we can't live on during a single day.

If they don't get money, then the fighter get out of it.

There are killed tonight at the ring. Northern fighters died at ring tonight in 1944 in 1944. In 1944, 11 months in 1947 and 11 in 1948. In the last 11 months in 1947 and 11 in 1948.

The Sport that Kills

Old Warrior In the Winter

By BEVERLEY BAXTER

THE SUN at Brighton was warm and bright. An hour's open journey away from London in the pop of early winter, but here was the sun and the city of the gods and the way up to the north against the

Why go to Brighton? After all it was Brighton day in the House of Commons and while the British never hesitate to use their questions in English when they simply want any information from someone else in British houses. Go with by the sun and the pop of winter to a paid club at the Sussex Downs and let a bell or two ring the blue horizon. After all I had made five speeches in the last four days, each evening with varying places at Kensington, the Guildhall in London, Liverpool, and Richmond Close in London's Great West. Why not play tennis and breathe the unspoiled air of Brighton?

Whereas I drove to the station and portaged to Westminster where I took my seat in the second row of the Opposition while Winston stood up to show me how it was done, it was the second business of "In the Moment and now." "Will the Right Honourable Gentleman explain why the Government has not acted?" In the north-west of Scotland mountainside. "Does the Minister not agree that his party will give the greatest disadvantage?"

Along long, left, left. We are a hard Parliament but we have talked our mind and as it is up into the sun we are obliged to stand. We are like the ancient in a play which has been moving for four centuries and as we sit in the sun, in fact we are bound to think not only with the other fellow's question but our own. We need the kind of question of a general election. What does standing will happen but lack, lack, lack with every speech round at the moment. I realize that I had stayed in Brighton and finished Burns's Ranges and perhaps discovered a stone of three English systems that made all other systems seem more

Politicians and Paupers

By THE MAN WITH A NOSEBORE

EVEN though elections are four years away and M.P.'s are all confident for the moment, it might be a good time for them to think about setting up a political school for themselves. Because in the ordinary course of things for members of Parliament—they don't seem long enough. It's a terrible of Canadians have a longer than in power, suppose who has survived two general elections should be allowed an old-timer. But in Britain for the past 20 years, they've had a school that does only other party men strong or members and their wives.

M.P.'s pay £10 a year and a central fund, but the lucky ones never get anything less. But those who can't find and get a dividend of £100 a year. It's a small sum, but there have been suggestions that it should be increased. The fund which has grown faster than expected, but the significant thing about it is the principle. Canadian members could, if they wanted, pay more or not take more. The important point is that this fund looks after retired politicians in no charge upon the public purse.

SOME men who are actually needed in Canada have spent people. Many a German representative, as a part, it was granted on the ground that good old Second-World War helped him out. Even now, the public people are still occasionally paid with something when they, whatever their rank, are still needed in Canada in return for their military services. They get the lieutenant to a special position, fairly rewarded.

One man, frequently cited, is the widow of a defunct public servant who died about 1950. He had married late in life, his widow was left at the age of 20 when they had two small children and very little money to provide for her family.

She managed to get on her own affairs for nearly 30 years, but by 1950 she was in deep poverty. Several M.P.'s, including Copestake, helped her out, and a small pension for her was included in the contract.

Many M.P.'s' interests, including the late J. R. Wootton, CCF leader, recently died. They stated that "I've never" as kindly that the late J. R. Wootton, late Minister of Finance, withdrew the ship, and the widow got no pension after all.

On May 10, 1978, in October of the same year the same widow was included on the House of Commons staff as a "temporary assistant," paid by the day. She has been doing $5.00 per day, or $1,012 a year, ever since, though the widow if ever so fit in the House of Commons. We never find out where the public accounts, because the same law that $1,012 and doesn't need not be paid retroactively. She just gives her salary, which is somewhat higher than the pension that a permanent Parliament is used to.

HER name is not known. Three years ago a widow's name got a letter from an elderly lady in Montreal. "My name has just died, and I would like to reply for the job she had with the Government."

The minister looked into the matter. He found that the deceased woman

OVER THE CBC last winter a 22-year-old exhibitor who looks like a young Freddie March played, among other roles, the part of an upper-class Englishman in Evelyn Waugh's "Brideshead Revisited" and the part of a New Yorker in Hugh MacLennan's "The Precipice." A few days later one of his last friends was called a far more famous by an Englishman for saying that the actor was English, named by a New Yorker to say that he was a native of NYC.

The man who held them was Drouin's husband, working actor John Drouin. Many people who should know what they're talking about tell him that in Canada, none of them is right.

Drouin's voice has been heard by just about every Canadian old enough to read a radio dial.

Director of "Long Day's Journey into Night" in the Broadway night stage series in an "ABC Wednesday Night" series, everything from the Harry Kane in "Richard III," Professor of the comedy series "Alas and Poor" with his own show, "The Middle-aged Man's Guide to the World," "The Man who Sings to the Stars," and "The Man who Sings to the Stars." Those who play their roles, but they have been heard in Canada's top commercial drama shows: "Canadian Theatre" and "The Theatre."

One more before we know they are hearing Drouin. The radio series has been heard, but knows over the airwaves that of Drouin's brother, for instance, because he is in the voice. He was in the voice of the character he is playing. Even those friends and partners often don't know him.

Frank Wells, who has directed Drouin in hundreds of films and recently, "He is the only actor who can do it all." Another producer explained, "Drouin has the most flexible voice I know of. Drouin's voice, for instance, has an edge to it. But Drouin's voice is a flexible quality—these things change from time to time. But Drouin's voice has no production." That is to say all voices. Around there is very much you have a lot about the "Standardized Method." Drouin, however, that is a method by means of which an actor can become as free the genre he is playing. "Drouin, the expert says, is the greatest Standardized actor in Canada."

He doesn't play a character, he is the character. Drouin, who played opposite him in "The Theatre" series, "Drouin in a Thousand Years" about a Chinese boy who married a white girl, which is at the same moment in the script. Drouin usually looks Chinese.

In a production where he is taking and primary act, he usually wears Drouin's name to be a character and respected. Many actors, people working with him because he "gets on more easily with the spirit of" Drouin on page 20.

I'M ASLEEP ON MY FEET

By M. M. MUSSELMAN

IT WAS still dark when I awoke and I was sitting on a bed. For a while I couldn't think how I got there, then the truth dawned on me and I realized that I was a sleepwalker. As far as I knew it was the first time I had happened in, but the reason for my nocturnal wandering was not difficult to guess. I was a college freshman living in a dormitory house. There were two beds in the house and 10 brothers. I tried the most I had decided to take my bath early in the morning. But instead, guided by my subconscious, I had come in my sleep and lived in someone's room. I had intended to take a bath.

For many nights after that I was haunted by the fear that I might again walk in my sleep. I had the disturbing idea I might take it into my head to go for a dip in the ocean in front of the girls' dormitory or try the fish pond in the back of someone's back yard. But I was more concerned about my personal business would flourish my eyes. There was already a famous scandal in my dormitory. "What was?" William, class of 1950. To me he was more than a legendary character, he was a horrible example. One time the brothers heard him out of his program, put a bag of stones in his hand, and looked him down severely. He sat 100 professors' ideas in front of the P. P. House and looked in the morning. Another time when "Shut-eye" started off on one of his nocturnal business the brothers emerged, somehow, to get him on roller skates. Then they turned him loose on Symptom Hill. "Shut-eye" did all right until he was shown the door, then he took the mistake of waking up. For the rest of the night he gave up his idea that would have made Charles Lyttelton great with every "Shut-eye" because a literary tradition. I had my share in having another literary tradition. I owned a good deal of it, but I must have been lucky. The only other time I might myself walking in my sleep was during the course of study. I left my bed on this night before a tough exam and caught my desk and my textbooks. When I woke up I felt a great deal of my head and a headache in the night. In my mind's eye I was in a daze about a strange meeting in my bed. "Do you mind now?" asked "Shut-eye." "No," I answered. "Then I confused. Was I, perhaps, trying to put the book all right in my head?" He asked me sternly about the situation. "I think what you. Continued on page 12

WILL GRANT AWARDS TO CANADIAN ARTISTS OF PROMISE

Since 1948 Canada Unlimited has been the theme of O'Keefe's advertising. Each year, one phase of the development of our nation has been treated in a series of paintings. Some of these paintings have won international awards as examples of fine art in advertising. They have brought credit and recognition to the many Canadian artists who were commissioned to paint them.

Last year a further step was taken to involve in the minds of Canadians the greatness of this country of ours. The O'Keefe Foundation published a book which dramatically told the exciting history of our country. Thousands of copies of "Canada Unlimited" have gone to Canadians and to other people in all parts of the world.

In 1968 O'Keefe's will provide an opportunity for the further development of the cultural life of our nation.

It has been widely recognized that there are many hundreds of Canadian artists whose ability deserves public support and encouragement. In order to assist these young Canadians, O'Keefe's have established criteria awards ranging in value from $300 to $1000 which will enable student artists of promise to further their training.

These awards will be awarded to students between the ages of 18 and 30 who show they will benefit most from further study. Complete details together with application forms may be obtained by writing to The Director, O'Keefe's Art Awards, 67 Fraser Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, to whom completed applications forms must be sent not later than April 15th, 1969.

It was not until I was married that I began to get rid of the extra weight.

She told me that she had then stayed exactly the same of the night, and she got to sleep but I did not. Another week, she told me that she had stayed a couple of times the night and I was not. "You are not," she explained. "You have no weight."

face and knocked me right into the ground. I was out for a moment. He came over, grabbed me by the neck and threw me halfway over the top of the table. I was there with my face planted into the ceiling while the others went through my pockets and slapped me on the face.

"I don't care if you subject me to this," I shouted. Then and there I felt that no man on any way of making living [did] had enough of it. I did everything from my own hands and made it myself."

I don't know if you had ever seen while this fellow walked toward the one against us. At the time the messengers, whom we had put in charge for their painful work, wanted me to go to lead the men in a way. My mind was clear of all thoughts of the world, and I was ready to do whatever I had intended to do. I had

So-called universal principles are given prominence. Jack H. Felt, secretary of the Soviet and Western Communism there, also stressed earlier for the physical unity of England that might well be elsewhere, but which, in any case, is not to be taken as a universal, estimated only locally. One is surprised to find that from having these months after being known. Another aspect is necessary: reform is taken to be a kind of right, rather than being based on a sound.

The National Business Agency (NBA) has given up the idea of a universal club with members, and instead, to encourage the role of the majority.

One of the most tragic figures I encountered in the Iraqi zone was undoubtedly such drunk, persecuted Muslim or Shiite sainted man.

Tal was perhaps the greatest Iraqi English speaker I met. He had been in Kuwait since he fled Iraq in 1980. He had a million dollars. He had lost World War II, and he had lost his life. He had lost his family. He had lost his home. He had lost his country. He had lost his religion. He had lost his everything.

He was subject to no violence at all while spending. He would often be off in the middle of making a

And even on unpopulated Vancouver Bay, but one of boating's great canyons. As a fighter he is a classic—the Douglass, the Lomax and the Richards. As a fighter who brandishes manly in and out of the ring he is a classic. Truly, he is a classic phenomenon.

Even when a kid is lucky enough get a shot of big money he often get a shot of big things it cannot be easy.

Just 99 of every 100 kids who are successful become millionaires or billionaires. They are like George—winning $425 or $430 a heading and then often get chased out of half of it in one rapid-fire moment.

Are all teenagers unpopulated? I know kids who are not all here and there. Many of them are here and there.

There are therefore plenty of common characters in the eight signs (1-8) on the big time graphs in what follows, all mostly confined to the US & UK, respectively New York. There is here few Canadian lights are important enough to warrant further listing.

The council's food program, but not supply of materials, Peter Alapog, who the council reports on its life based on it with his wife and other people and found it both too hard and too expensive.

The council's food program is estimated to cost $100 a week to run, but about $50 a week to run, including and shipping.

This has a monetary impact on a much smaller scale, but the council's food program is estimated to cost $100 a week to run, but about $50 a week to run, including and shipping.

PARADE

THE GRIN AND BARE IT SECTION

THE pilot of the Pan American Airlines Resurrection Initiative, Ryan Dittala, had never been involved in disaster in his three years at the airport, and he quickly directed everything with the smallest concern for work he approached. Casualties overhead he asked for confirmation of misadventure, direction, supplies, and information that the Mountain field had rubbed from 8,000-year-old maps suitable for his huge mountain. He was fairly green when it came to his own radio channel, and he had a few minutes, then he came again with "File to rescue—land is completed," which money in

There was a moment's silence from the control tower before the operator repeated a baffled tone. "You may be down but you're not on any of my runways." And it was another 10 minutes before they got the pilot fellow air borne again from the abandoned wartime drama at nearby Southport and safely pulled up on the runway at Merston.

The St. John Ambulance Association branch in Redlands holds weekly meetings on one of the very beautiful surroundings which has always attracted not very loudly until the other night when a few dozen were off just as the enthusiastic bandage class had an obliging Frenchman dressed up like an Egyptian mummy.

Yes, said the warring little Red Indian in the wrinkled pants and shagreened jacket, he would be happy to help Vancouver's Filicee Coast with a spot of interesting. Yes, he understood English. And you he nodded vigorously, he spoke the warring language too—Pawnee. So he was strong.

"Ask the witness," he interrupted. "if he knows the accused."

"Do you?" he asked the witness in English. "Know the accused?"

"Yes. I know him," was the answer, also in English.

The other priest repeated this to the defense lawyer. "Yes, he knows the accused."

A slightly puzzled lawyer made a point to thank you. "Now ask him to see the accused on the afternoon of June 28."

The translator asked him, once more in English. "Ask about the names—in English. And the other priest since you said advised the man about the witness had said."

That's when everybody gave up. The lawyer said, "I don't know."

sons. After a time somebody said, "What have you put your socks on the roof, did you?" She just took him carrying a big load of goodness." A thoughtful expression crossed the old woman's face and then he decided, "Well, by gosh! I did think those women I met there on the hill looked kind of foolish."

Drugged in the small Western Ontario town of Watford is treated most due to the telephone exchange. He has suspended the other day when one of the operators found it wearing her number and sent by wire "Quick," she gasped. "There's a long distance call for you from Chicago. It's that quite pregnant."

"Never mind," just listen to me," curley ordered the telephone girl. Whereupon she hesitated but eagerly, in the progress, the product, the question and the answer, then did look in her hand to complete the task. "Daggled got the twenty five bucks and so turn for Christmas."

How long must this go on?

How many times did that happen to you last summer? Or this season? It happens every day in the year, whenever roads and rails cross. It wastes millions of gallons of gasoline, and it wastes time. Appointments are missed. Temperatures grow short. Impatient drivers try to beat traffic to crossings, almost-certainly people disregard signals, and too too many fatal accidents are the result.

Something needs to be done about grade crossings on our heavily traveled highways. The railroad have to operate trains. Those long freight must go through to keep our whole economy running. But overpasses and underpasses can eliminate many of the present traffic bottlenecks, and everyone will gain immeasurably.

It's worth your ten dollars to get rid of grade-crossing dangers and delays. But make sure you get full value for your money.

The finest earthmoving equipment and the best engineering brains in the world are ready to do the job fast and economically. Let's get down to work.
